ABOUT SILICON VALLEY WINERIES

Santa Cruz Mountains appellation, an area with a soil and climate that closely resemble the Burgundy region in France. The Santa Clara Mountain wine region was named the most underappreciated appellation in the world by Wine Spectator Magazine.

South Bay and Peninsula, from Woodside to Saratoga, was prized by early winemaker Paul Masson, who named the section, "chaîne d'or", meaning, chain of gold.

Santa Clara Valley, California's oldest continuously-producing wine growing region. This area was growing grapes for the Missions before the Napa area was developed, and was known for its wonderfully rich soil and ideal climate.
